Thank you for supporting my small business!

Since 2008, I have been writing teachmama.com, sharing ways that parents & families can take an active role in their children's education. It's been an absolute dream and my heart's work.

As a high school English teacher & Reading Specialist, I knew that with a teeny, tiny bit of support from home could go a long way when kids got to school. I also knew that when we know better, we do better--and most people wanted to know how to set their kids up for success. They wanted to know how to teach kids the ABCs, to recognize and understand the 123s, to grow curious about the world around them, and to love books and reading.

So though the focus has shifted slightly over the years, the main goal of teachmama.com is the same: to help families cultivate meaningful relationships and to build bridges between home and school.

The blog has grown with my family--Maddy, Owen, and Cora were babies when I began this work, and they're young adults now. Thank you for sticking with us all these years. Every purchase you make from our shop is truly appreciated, and I hope that these resources serve you and your family well.
